Event overview

The pandemic has been a catalyst for businesses to accelerate digitalization efforts. And the rapid pace of digital transformation has generated increased compliance risk - in our recent survey of 1,550 compliance leaders across 18 global markets and 6 sectors 41% stated that ill-considered and poorly implemented technology has already resulted in enforcement investigations. At the same time, technology has the potential to enable comprehensive and connected compliance functions in an increasingly complex regulatory landscape. Companies globally are deploying compliance technology, although just 56% of compliance leaders report that compliance technology is effectively achieving its primary purpose.

As such, it is imperative that compliance leaders look at technology from two angles: as a driver of emerging risks and challenges, and as a core component of an effective and agile compliance function.
